OGDEN BOOSTERS LAND
1910 CONVENTION

Lively Struggle for Next Meeting Place Ends in Victory for Junction City, Big Gathering of Woolgrowers a Decided Success, Speech of Judge Heywood Landed Montana Vote, F. J. Kiesel a Strenuous Worker.

What the Ogden delegates to the National Woolgrowers' convention at Pocatello, which was concluded last night, started out to accomplish, has been done. Ogden has been selected as the next meeting place of the woolgrowers, which will be next year, 1910. The struggle for the convention of 1910 was a lively one, and Ogden came out victor, largely because of the push and enthusiasm of the "Ogden Boosters," who left the city only a few days ago determined to land the 1910 convention.

Denver was a hard fighter in the contest and polled a heavy vote for the honors, but Ogden was a little stronger in the city of the plains, and succeeded in landing the prize. The final count gave Ogden 212 and Denver 197. All the Ogden boys did splendid work in securing this much coveted convention, and it is said that Judge Heywood, president of the Weber Club of Ogden, struck the happy responding chord for Ogden in a characteristic speech, which he is capable of delivering, gaining the 33 votes from the Montana delegation for Ogden. The Honorable Fred J. Kiesel and others of Ogden did great work toward securing the convention for the Junction City.

The Ogden delegates to the convention, with the large number of Ogden Boosters will return home today. According to telephonic advices they are very happy over the victory gained and will return home feeling they have done a good turn for Ogden.

The forty-fifth annual convention of the National Woolgrowers of America ended last night, with the election of officers and the selection of Ogden, Utah, as the next place of meeting. Fred W. Gooding of Shoshone was re-elected president, George S. Walker of Cheyenne was again chosen as secretary, and Lewis Penwell of Helena was once more selected as treasurer. A. J. Knollin of Chicago succeeded Joseph E. Wines of Mechanicsburg, O., as eastern supervisor, and president, and A. J. Delfelder of Laramie, Wyo., succeeded Dr. J. M. Wilson of Wyoming as western vice-president.

Gifford Pinchott, head of the National Forestry bureau, was given a rap in the following resolution: "We regret to learn by telegraphic correspondence, submitted to this convention, that the United States forester has found occasion for exceptions in the actions or considerations heretofore given him or the service he represents by this association, or by individual members thereof."

"It has been and is the purpose of this association to treat all official representatives of the United States state governments with the consideration due gentlemen and the offices they hold, and to discuss questions involving the great industry we represent with becoming dignity and with that honest, frank, straightforward manner which we ask of all those who oppose our views, and which become the traditions of American citizenship. We feel that the honorable forester has misinterpreted the motive and intent of this association in former conventions in a manner that has given unwarranted offense to him; at the time that it reflects upon the dignity, fairness and candor of this association."

The telegraphic correspondence referred to in the resolutions includes messages and telegrams which were recently passed between Secretary Walker, of the national association, and Chief Forester Pinchott, in which the latter said in response to an invitation to attend the Pocatello convention that until such time as the association gave assurance of a desire to discuss national forest matters on broad and more unselfish grounds than heretofore, he would not feel justified in accepting an invitation to attend such convention.

Resolutions were adopted, opposing any reduction in the present tariff on wool, and recommending the establishment in Chicago of a central storage depot for national wool warehouse and the creation of an auxiliary warehouse at Omaha. The creation of forest reserves was commended so long as the plan did not impose additional taxes upon the livestock industry. The extension of grazing permits and the reduction of grazing fees were also recommended. The practice of the forestry service in imposing without trial fines on graziers in forest reserves was denounced. The creation of state commissioners for the conservation of natural resources for the benefit of citizens was recommended.

STORMS NORTH AND WEST CONTINUE

Telegrams received at local railroad headquarters yesterday morning indicate that the present storm continues north, south and west of Ogden, but that everything is clearing up nicely along the Union Pacific eastward and that there is practically no interruption of train service between Omaha and Ogden. All trains from the east are practically on schedule time, and while water is high at various points on the Utah division and between Rawlins and Cheyenne, no serious washouts are apprehended or danger from track conditions anticipated. Oregon Short Line trains were also nearly on time, and while the track is reported soft at various points between Ogden and Pocatello, and east and west from that point, no serious interruption in the service is entertained by operating officials of that system. The cold weather north of Pocatello, on the Montana division, has left the track in good condition and no delays of any nature are being experienced between Pocatello and Butte, the latter city depending largely on Short Line trains at this time owing to serious delays and interruption of traffic on the Northern Pacific, Great Northern and Milwaukee systems.

OVERFLOW OF OGDEN AND WEBER RIVERS CHECKED.

Stub Trains Over S. P. Still Running, Others Diverted Over San Pedro Route.

Ogden weather still continues at a high temperature, but sufficiently lowered to check in a degree the overflow attitude of the Ogden and Weber rivers. While some damage has been done to property in the lower lands along the two rivers, because of the high water tide of the last few days, no heavy losses have been sustained and at this time the banks of the rivers are capable of holding the waters within their natural channels. The heavy flow of water in river channels along the Southern Pacific railroad west of Ogden has greatly impeded passenger and freight traffic over that road, and it is the opinion of railroad men in Ogden that it will likely be a number of days before the difficulty is overcome and the regular movement of trains over that road resumed. The washouts doing the most damage prevail in the state of California, near Sacramento, and as a result transcontinental trains for San Francisco are still being diverted over the southern route, over the San Pedro Route.

Two "stub" passenger trains are being run out of Ogden to western points on the S. P. this side of Roseville, California, and all passengers having tickets for places this side of Roseville are being dispatched over the road in these "stub" trains. Those passengers having tickets for other western points in California south of Sacramento are being sent over the San Pedro Route, and those whose destination is north of San Francisco are being switched at Ogden onto the Oregon Short Line through Idaho and Oregon.

The S. P. track is said to be open as far west as Roseville, California, which is about 19 miles this side of Sacramento. The heavy tide of water is doing the most damage to the heavy trestle work of the road in that vicinity that it is unsafe to attempt to pass trains over the road there.

CONFERENCE BETWEEN SHEEP-MEN AND GRAZING CHIEF IN MEN AND GRAZING CHIEF.

Strained Relations Amicably Adjusted and Several Perplexing Questions Satisfactorily Settled.

District Forester Clyde Leavitt, Assistant Forester L. F. Kneipp, of Washington, D. C., and District Grazing Chief H. E. Penn have returned from their meetings with Idaho sheep men, and report a most successful trip.

Conferences were held at Shoshone and Boise, and the matters discussed, consisting largely of the grazing of sheep in the forests of that section, were amicably settled. The officials are elated over the outcome of the meetings as the relations between the forest service and the sheep men of western Idaho have been somewhat strained of late, a condition which has now been happily eliminated by those involved getting together and establishing a more friendly acquaintance than has heretofore existed.

The meeting at Shoshone, January 8 and 9, was attended by 46 out of the 47 owners who graze their sheep on the Sawtooth range, in other words, a majority of the owners of 335,000 sheep were present at the conference and assisted in settling the several perplexing questions at hand. The local association was formed, which will be known as the Sawtooth Wool Growers, with Barlow Ferguson of Halley, as president, and Charles Coon, as secretary.

After perfecting the organization, an advisory board of five members was appointed, consisting of Edward W. Gooding, Dr. H. S. Bettis, Hugh Sprent, Charles Owens and Jake Rolfsen. The second session was taken up with the deliberations of the new board. The forest officials stated their ideas on the different matters, assuring the sheep men that it was the policy of the service to foster and protect the industry and in every way lend assistance. They denied the allegation that the advisory boards, appointed at former meetings at Mountain Home and Weiser, had been ignored, and stated that all boards of a similar nature would be given every attention possible.

Having come to a better understanding regarding the intents and purposes of the service, the sheep men were not slow in reciprocating in friendliness with the result that all the matters under discussion were practically settled, avoiding the necessity of an appeal to Washington, D. C.

It was practically agreed to give sheep owners a five year lease of the range, instead of one year, as heretofore; that is, an assurance that the contracts would be renewed from year to year with a guarantee that no reduction in allotment would be made during the five years greater than one of 10 per cent in any single year. There have been cuts made as high as 15 per cent and even 20 per cent. All permits for grazing above 8,000 were cut 10 per cent. All between 5,000 and 8,000 were cut 7-12 per cent, and all between 2,500 and 5,000 were cut 5 per cent. No reductions were made below 2,500. Thus all allotments were practically decided upon except a few minor decisions, which were left for settlement when the board of the forest supervisors could visit certain districts and ascertain the exact conditions existing there.

Five new class A owners or "beginners" were admitted to the Sawtooth range and allotments arranged aggregating 7,100. It is to provide for and protect these latter owners that the cuts above mentioned are made.

Upon January 11 and 12, a meeting was held at Boise, at which practically the same results were accomplished as in the case of the Sawtooth range. Various matters under discussion were settled to the satisfaction of all concerned. A meeting of the sheep men of the Payette forest will be held at Emmet, Idaho, on the 21st of January, to organize a local association, and one will be held at Boise upon the 25th. The woolgrowers are also arranging for a meeting in the near future.

NEW SYSTEM OF BOOK
KEEPING

INSTALLED AT FIRST NATIONAL BANK OF OGDEN.

Makes Decided Advance Along Lines of Simplified Accounts, Invention of Salt Lake Bookkeeper.

The First National Bank of Ogden has installed a new system of bookkeeping, which is apparently a decided advance along the lines of simplified accounts. The system is called The Kelly Patent Shifting Sheet Ledger and is used in connection with the Van Voorhis Statement System. It is the invention of Mr. Van Voorhis, head bookkeeper of the Walker Brothers bank of Salt Lake, and is receiving widespread attention from the banking institutions of the country. Only two books are used at a time, while several were necessary with the system formerly employed at the local bank. In using the so-called shifting sheet ledger, the pages are shifted from one position to another by the patent arrangement of the book as fast as checks and deposits are entered, thus exposing the balance column on all changed accounts to a position beyond the ledger proper or inactive accounts.

After all checks and deposits have been received from clearings and tellers, and all sheets shifted to proper position, the balances being extended, the latter are taken off upon an adding machine, the balances that act as debits being first taken. Upon a second list are taken the balances that act as credits. The difference, then, between the sums of the two lists, shows the difference between the deposits made and the amount withdrawn by check, or the actual gain or loss of the day's business.

The new system is said to offer less liability to errors than any system yet invented and is a great saving of time and expensive record books as well. A clearing house sheet, or clearing desk, is also used in connection with the above, in which the clearing teller receives at the end of the day the debits and credits from the paying teller, the receiving teller, the exchange and the collection department. These are sorted and turned over to the respective bookkeepers, after which a recapitulation of the entire receipts and disbursements is made, to which all departments of the bank must secure a balance before the daily statement may be completed.
